Judy Lewis

A Personal Perspective

Judy began drawing as a child with her first exhibit at age 11. Her style is a blend of Representational and Impressionism. Judy primarily works without references, using her memories and imagination to paint landscapes and still life that reflect her own vision and appreciation of the beauty around her. She also specializes in creating miniature paintings as small as 1". Her work has won awards and is sold throughout the United States and internationally.

She is passionate about involving the community and promoting art through seminars, free demonstrations, and teaching art.

Through High Desert Artists she is part of a group who teach seniors how to paint at the local Senior Center. She has also curated several of the Mountain Artists Guild's Miniature Art Shows.

Artist's Statement

My philosophy about art is the same as my life philosophy: be happy and joyful and I try to reflect that in my art so I can contribute in a small way to adding joy and color to someone's world.

My art is part of my heart. I can't not create--I must. I'm inspired by the American West and travels throughout the United States and Great Britain.

I'm currently inspired by my life in the high country outside Prescott, Arizona and loving it!
