Michelle Marman

Michelle Marman is a painter, illustrator, muralist, and community arts leader. She grew up in the rugged beauty of Glennallen, Alaska, then twelve years ago moved to the beauty of the sweeping prairie and badlands of western North Dakota. Beach the idyllic North Dakota/Montana border town is home to Michelle, her husband, children, family and the joyful faith and church-based community from which Michelle draws purpose and inspiration for her life and art.

Michelle has no formal training in art beyond the nurturing's of her high school art teacher.

As an artist she has stood on the shoulders of her mother painting to Bob Ross, her grandpa giving art lessons, encouragement from an Alaskan artist Gail Niebrugge, and her dad's abundant support and motivation.

Michelle is driven to learn about, examine, experiment with and practice art. God has blessed her with creative talent and it is an integral part of who she is.
